BAND MUST HAVE SOME $30 TOOTERS

Aylett, He Of the Big Bassoon, Is Boss Of Band

Supervisor Aylett, ex-orator of the Territorial legislative halls, and ex-player of the big bassoon in the band, has stepped forth as the musical dictator and brass-band expert of the Board of Supervisors. Captain Berger, who is only bantamweight, henceforth is as nothing, compared with the new boss.

Berger has been hardly forty years at the head of the band, so his knowledge of music-making, and its sundry ramifications, cannot be classed alongside that of Aylett, once star performer on the big bassoon.

Henceforth Berger must have seven "steenth" class musicians at $30 a month in the band, whether he can get them or not. One real horn player at $60 he dare not have, because Aylett believes that the salary should go for the job and not for the man. Certain horns can be blown for $30 per month according to Aylett's figuring, and while there are $30-men available, why hire a $50 one. Two tooters tooting at $30 per twelfth-year can make more noise than one $60 tooter even though the two tooters toot too tootily and not always in unison.

Anyway, Aylett went out. Berger must have a sprinkling of $30 tooters, and he dare not divide his lump appropriation so as to hire any $60 tooters more than a limited number of $30 tooters.

All musicians look alike to Aylett and two $30 tooters look a lot more impressive in parade than one $60 tooter. Incidentally, there is a rumor that Captain Berger did not consider Aylett even a $30 tooter in the ancient days.
